THE TIMES.

For President
HENRY CLAY,
Of Kentucky.

FAYETTE:
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1842.

The Tariff Law occupies our entire room this week. It, however, will be a valuable document for preservation, and should be read by every one, and laid away for future reference. In a week or two we shall have completed the publication of the laws, and will be able to furnish our readers a greater variety of miscellaneous and other matter.

MR. WEBSTER'S SPEECH.
The anxiously looked for speech of Mr. Webster has at length arrived. We have not room this week to give it, or even a synopsis of it. Suffice it, he takes his stand by Mr. Tyler, determined to survive or perish with his administration—censures the whigs for denouncing Mr. Tyler—exhorts them to extend a liberal support to his administration—in favor of the Exchequer in preference to any other measure that has ever been before the country—rebukes the whig State Convention of Massachusetts for declaring Mr. Tyler no longer a whig, and a preference for Clay for the Presidency. A good portion of the speech is devoted to the late treaty with Great Britain, and other matters that yet remain to be settled between the two nations. Nothing is hinted as to his future course; whether he will remain in the cabinet or not, is a matter of speculation. As matters now stand, Mr. Webster can neither look for or expect support from the great body of the whigs, who have heretofore placed such implicit confidence in him. As soon as the crowded state of our columns will permit, we will either publish the speech, or such a notice of it as will inform our readers of its contents.

THE ELECTIONS.
As far as heard from the Maryland election returns show on joint ballot: 36 whigs; 50 locos; several counties yet to be heard from, electing, in all, 15 delegates and 1 senator. The counties to be heard from elected all whigs last year, and should they do the same this, the joint vote will stand: whigs, 52; locos, 50, with one independent member.
From Ohio, but few returns have yet been received, which generally show an increase in favor of the locos.

UNFORTUNATE AFFAIR.

By the last Boonville Observer, we have the particulars of the unfortunate affair that took place in that city on the 13th inst., by which Mr. Forsythe lost his life. They are as follows:
"Thursday was the day appointed for the Regimental muster. On the morning of that day a number of persons, some twenty-five or thirty, young men as we are informed with one or two exceptions, appeared in the streets masked, and otherwise disguised in grotesque dresses. In short it was one of those fantastical exhibitions which have so frequently been resorted to in other places, to burlesque what very many consider an efficient and oppressive militia system. After parading through the streets, and listening to a mock heroic speech from one of its members, the company entered the street east of the court house, and turned into an open lot fronting the N. E. corner of the public square. On the north of this distant forty or fifty yards is a street, in which Col. Turley had formed his regiment preparatory to marching them out to the drill ground. While the parties were in this position, Col. Turley declared to his regiment his determination to arrest the company, and detain them under guard. With this view he ordered the Regiment to counter-march, and when his right came opposite to the company, the order was given to advance upon them in "quick time" or "double quick time," which was obeyed, the field officers of the Regiment taking the lead; the parties were soon in close contact. The leader of the company was rode over. Bricks, bats, and stones were thrown by both sides—which was commenced, it is said, by the militia. One of these missiles struck the Lieutenant Colonel, James L. Forsythe, on the head, and felled him from his horse. An order was given to the Regiment to load, but better counsels prevailed, and the affair was finally ended by Col. Turley leading his Regiment back into the street, and proceeding to the usual muster field." Mr. Forsythe expired in the afternoon of the next day.

MURDER.—We learn from a letter received by a gentleman in this place, from a friend in Liberty, Clay county, that Maj. John Hays, of that place, was killed, by a young man named Turnham, on Sunday morning last.

MAIMED BEET.—A beet was sent to our office the other day, by a lady of this place, which surpasses any thing in the beet line we ever seen, and we think it cannot be beaten, weighing somewhere between six and fifty pounds. We take this method of saying to the lady who sent the beet, that it will afford us much pleasure to dispose of it in the manner she requested, and shall embrace the first opportunity to make the disposal.

SUICIDE.—We learn that a gentleman by the name of Fizer, Cabinet maker, residing in Saline county, committed suicide a few days since by taking laudanum.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We learn that a young man by the name of Reynolds, residing in Saline county, met an untimely end a few days since, in the following manner: He was hunting in the woods, carrying a loaded gun; the trigger caught by a twig which discharged the contents of the gun in his side. He died the next day.

Col. Benton is reported in St. Louis.

The whigs of Cooper county have formed a Clay Club.

TENNESSEE LEGISLATURE.
Mr. DOUGLASS, Speaker of the House of Representatives, has resigned his seat in the House, and an order has been issued for a new election. On Tuesday morning, the House was organized by the election of Mr. Buchanan (Whig) by a majority of three Whigs over Mr. Polk of Maury. (Loco Foco.) The Governor's message was received and read. He recommends the Districting of the State, as the only means of securing a representation in Congress in either body. He also presses the necessity of an election of U. S. Senators. He refers all the distresses of the country to the destruction of a national currency, a return to which can only afford real and permanent relief. The circulation of the Banks of Tennessee has been reduced from $5,000,000 to about $1,000,000.
In the Legislature, the various subjects of this message have been referred, and there were many professions of a desire to apportion the congressional districts in a fair and acceptable manner. Two committees have been appointed—one to district the State for Congress, and the other for the Legislature.

The Lady's Book for October is on our table. It is, as usual, replete with matter both interesting and amusing. Of the various periodicals received by us, monthly, there is not one that surpasses this, for its typographical execution and the lithographic engravings, of which one or more ornament each number.

The bustle—that miserable contrivance to render monstrous the beautiful handiwork of God—we are glad to notice, is rapidly disappearing. The Philadelphia physicians have declared their productive of diseases of the spine—consequently the ladies are afraid to wear them.

DIED.—On Friday evening, 14th inst., SARAH W., daughter of Francis E. and Martha Ann Williams, in the 5th year of her age.
